The Moor.

I am faint
To feel upon the beauty of the moon!
Somewhat absent, seeming so drowsy in woe:
A queen, whom some great battle-day has left Unkingdom'd and a widow, while the stars,
Thy handmaids, are standing back in awe,
Gazing in silence on thy mighty grief!
All men have loved thee for thy beauty, moon!
Adam has turned from Eve's fair face to thee,
And drank thy beauty with his serene eyes.
—Alexander Smith.

VARIETY.

The days of courtship are the happiest of our lives.
Prudence is too often the only virtue left us at seventy-two.

It is well for the humble when they have sufficient education to render them callous to contempt.

Premature consolation is but the remembrance of sorrow.

The fall of an apple taught Newton the clock-work of the universe.

The sum of all things is to serve God well and do no ill thing.

Death makes our enemies cease to hate us, and our friends to love us more.

Praise, to be valuable, must come from a good judge.

Benefit your friends that they may love you more dearly still.

The Atlantic Ocean is estimated as three miles, and the Pacific as four miles deep.

There are six or seven generations of gnats in a summer, and each lays 250 eggs.

There are about 9,000 cells in a square foot of honey-comb. 5,000 bees weigh a pound.

A swarm of bees contains from 10,000 to 50,000 in a natural state, from 30,000 to 40,000 in a hive.

FOURTH RELIGION.—A forced match between a man and his religion sours his temper and leaves a barren bed.

SELF-LOVE.—It is easy to look down on others; to look down on ourselves is the difficulty.

A French woman talks a great deal more than she thinks.—An English woman thinks a great deal more than she talks.

Life is to be hated only when its continuance would thwart the purpose of its gift. When the alternative is martyrdom or apostasy.

Friendship requires actions; love requires not so much proofs as expressions of love. Love demands little else than the power to feel and to require love.

"They don't make me good mirrors as they used to," remarked an old maid, as she observed her sunken eye, wrinkled face and livid complexion in a glass that she usually looked into.

Oceans of ink and reams of paper have been expended to reform the social and political condition of man. The only way to effect this object, is, to "do as you would be done by."

Diogenes being asked the biting of which beast was most dangerous, answered: "If you mean wild beasts, 'tis the slanderer—if tame ones, the flatterers."

A canary bird was singing in a cage, which was hanging inside of a window, at the residence of Ephraim Rogers, Esq., of Beverly, recently, when a sparrowhawk pounced at him from without, striking the glass with great force, but without breaking it.
The bird was so frightened that it fluttered two or three times around the cage and dropped dead.

Here is an excellent paragraph which we find in one of our exchanges. "It is eloquent—it is true."
"If there is a man who can eat his bread in peace with God and man, it is the man who has brought that bread out of the earth. It is creaked by no fraud, it is wet by no tears, it is stained by no blood."

A biography of Robespierre, published in a late Irish paper, concludes with the following remarkable sentence:—"This extraordinary man left no children behind him except his brother, who was killed at the same time."

How to JUDGE OF CHARACTER.—It has been shrewdly remarked that what persons are by starts, they are by nature. You see them, at such times, of their guard. Habit may restrain vice, and virtue may be obscured by passion; but intervals best discover the man. We fancy this is strictly true.

OPINION.—If those who differ on speculative points would walk together, now and then, in the country, they might find many objects that must unite them.
The same bodily feeling is productive, in some degree, of the same mental one. Enjoyment from sun and air, from exercise and odors, brings hearts together that schools, and council-chambers, and popular assemblies have stood between for years.—Epicurus.

A DANDY AND HIS TURKEY.—Justice Marshall was in the habit of going to market himself, and carrying home his purchases. Frequently he would be seen at sunrise, with poultry in one hand and vegetables in the other. On one of these occasions, a fashionable young man from the North, who had removed to Richmond, was swearing violently because he could find no one to carry home his turkey. Marshall stepped up and asked him where he lived, and said,
"On being told—

"When he came to the house the young man inquired: "What shall I pay you?"

"O, nothing said the Chief Justice, "it was on my way and no trouble."

"Who was that polite old man that brought home my turkey?" inquired this man of a bystander.

"That," replied he, "is John Marshall, Chief Justice of the United States."

"Why did he bring home my turkey?" asked he.

"To give you a severe reprimand and teach you to attend to your own business," was the reply.

True genuine greatness never feels above doing anything that is useful, but especially the truly great man will never feel above helping himself.

Alca Cook very truly says: "To appreciate the value of newspapers, we have only to suppose they were to be discontinued for a month."

"A woman is always at the bottom of trouble." You remember the Shah of Persia. When he was told that a workman had fallen from a ladder, he called out "Who is she? Who is she?" "Please your majesty, 'tis a he." "Nonsense!" said the Shah, "there was never an accident without a woman; who is she?" The Shah was right; the man had fallen from his ladder by looking at a woman in a window. Many a man does this in other countries besides Persia.

It is given out that General Tom Thumb received 567 valentines at London, on the 4th of February.

Here is a specimen of quaint, childlike description: A child wanted to describe a snake to its aunt, and said it was "a thing all tail clear up to the head."

It is stated that $4,000,000 worth of oysters are sold in New-York annually.
